

25 JUNE 2026

What's New

Insights and Fixes - 25 June 2026

This round adds a brand-new Insights section to the Progress tab, lets you edit a workout's date, and fixes how sets get recorded. Thanks for testing!

Your data still lives only in your own browser on your own device (no accounts yet). Use Settings -> Export to back it up or move it to another device. Insights are calculated from your saved workouts, so the more you log, the more they show.

1 New: Insights on the Progress Tab

Open the Progress tab - there is a new Insights card at the top. Once you have some finished workouts, it shows:

This week's goal ring: A circle that fills toward your weekly workout goal. Set the goal in Settings -> Weekly goal (default 3 per week).

Quick stats: Your current week streak, days this month, and lifetime totals - workouts, sets, reps, and total weight moved.

Personal records: The heaviest weight you have hit for each exercise.

Last 12 weeks heatmap: A grid of squares, one per day, that get darker the more sets you did. Tap a square to see that day's details in a speech bubble - great on phones.

Volume this month: Your total work (reps x weight) this month, with an up/down percentage vs last month.

Since you started: How much each exercise has gone up or down in weight since your first session with it.

Try it: do (or edit) a few workouts with weights over different days, then open Progress and explore the Insights card. Tap the heatmap squares too.

2 New: Edit a Workout's Date

When you start or edit a workout, there is now a Date field at the top. Changing it moves the workout to that day - and the wording updates to match (move it to a Friday and it becomes a 'Friday workout' in your history).

Try it: Today tab -> find a finished workout under Recent workouts -> Edit -> change the Date -> Finish. Check that it shows the new date and day name in your history.

3Fix: Only Ticked Sets Are Recorded

Previously, finishing a workout without ticking any sets could still save it - and could even wrongly celebrate a 'new personal record' using weights you never actually did.

Now:

- A workout won't finish unless you've ticked at least one set as done - you'll get a friendly nudge, or you can Discard.
- Only ticked sets count toward your sets, reps, weights, records, and Insights.

Try it: Start a workout, tick nothing, and tap Finish - it should ask you to tick a set first (no phantom record). Then tick one set and finish normally.

Found something off? Note what you did and what happened - that is the most useful feedback.