

Privacy

Athena's Arena (Justaino) - Last updated: 26 June 2026

This is a short, plain-English note about what the app stores and how to remove it. It is a small personal project shared with friends, not a commercial service.

1 What's Stored

Your email address: Used only to sign in to your account.

Your workout data: Your profiles, exercises, and workout history.

That's it. No tracking, no ads, no analytics, nothing shared with anyone else.

2 Where It's Stored

- In your browser (localStorage) on each device you use.
- In the cloud with Supabase (supabase.com), a third-party hosting service, so your data syncs across your devices.

Your data is protected by Row-Level Security: each account can only ever read or write its own rows - no one else (including other signed-in users) can see your workouts.

3 How to Delete Your Data

Delete your data:

Go to Settings -> Privacy and data -> Delete my data. This permanently removes all your profiles, exercises, and history from both the cloud and your device. It cannot be undone - export a backup first (Settings -> Backup) if you want to keep a copy.

Delete your login / account too:

The 'Delete my data' button clears your data but does not remove the login itself (that needs admin access the app deliberately does not carry in the browser). If you also want your email and account removed, just email the owner and it will be deleted from the dashboard.

- The app only ever uses Supabase's publishable key in the browser, which is safe to share. The security comes from Row-Level Security, not from hiding the key. The secret/admin key is never shipped.
- Because it is a free hobby project, the cloud database may pause after about a week of inactivity and take a few seconds to wake up on your next visit.